

It is at the start were the President-elect, Mrs. Wilson, their daughters, the Misses Margaret, Eleanor and Jessie, and the 500 Princeton students who acted as special escort.

As the train started from Princeton the President-elect stood on the platform of the last of the fourteen cars. With his hand he looked down on a mass of fluttering handkerchiefs and banners. The smile on his lips vanished as the train gained headway. His lips were moving. The crowd at his feet heard him joining in the singing of the college anthem:

His eyes shall give
While they shall live
Three cheers for old Nassau.
STILL WAVING HAT AS TRAIN MOVES AWAY.

As the train moved away Princeton saw him still standing uncovered, his hat waving rhythmically to the chorus of the song.

Mrs. Wilson and the Misses Wilson, grouped on the platform, waved their handkerchiefs and cheered their farewells with tears glistening in their eyes. The mass of the townspeople beyond the tracks ceased cheering and stood silently listening while the students finished their anthem.

Long before the hour set for Mr. Wilson's departure Princeton students were trooping from the campus through Blair Arch to the station. They assembled, nearly a thousand strong—those departing and those remaining behind—around the long line of steel cars. The townspeople were there in greater numbers.

Just before leaving the Wilson cottage the President-elect and Mrs. Wilson went to the home of Mrs. Anna Hicketta, their next door neighbor, who is ill and could not go to the house to say goodbye. Then all entered the autos and the march to the station was begun.

En route children from the public school were massed on the corners, waving American flags and cheering shrilly. The President-elect and his family responded by waving their handkerchiefs, and the entire trip was a real ovation.

WILSON BORRY HE CAN'T RIVAL THE CHEERS.

At the station no attempt was made to keep the crowd back and the President-elect and Mrs. Wilson held a brief handshaking levee before they entered their car. After entering the car Mr. Wilson posed on the platform for the photographers.

Then the several hundred students who were not going to make the trip ranged in front of the train and, led by the regular cheer leaders, gave the various university cheers, winding up with a tiger growl that brought from the President-elect the compliment:

"Great cheering. I wish that I could give as good a cheer in response."

Mr. and Mrs. Wilson were greatly moved by the warmth of the "send-off" by their home folks. They remained at the car door as long as any one was in sight, and then took their seats, their faces serious and their eyes tear filled.

A search for two missing grips, led by Mr. Wilson, finally culminated in the party. The grips were found on the platform, and then the President-elect and his family "went visiting" with their student escort.

WILSON MAKES A FORECAST OF INAUGURAL WEATHER.

Just before the train reached Philadelphia the President-elect made a forecast of the weather for the inauguration. The canvas back of his motor stop, which he calls "an infallible barometer," was quite limp today. It usually is stiff when rain or inclement weather is in sight, he told the correspondent when he reached there.

Mr. Wilson outlined his plans for tonight, saying he would make a brief call on President Taft with Mrs. Wilson, but did not expect to see any official folk. Besides the family dinner, Mr. Wilson said he would go to the Princeton square, resting immediately after, as he had no other engagements.

Mr. Wilson said his cabinet was "provisionally completed."

"One doesn't know about those things until the last minute," he said. He intimated that he was not sure as to all acceptances yet.

Mr. Wilson was not sure when he would send the names of his cabinet to the Senate. He did not know whether it would be to-morrow or Wednesday, but expected to decide on reaching Washington as soon as he learned the plans for convening the Senate after the inauguration.

PRESIDENT-ELECT AFFECTED BY PRINCETON FAREWELL.

The President-elect spoke enthusiastically of the farewell at Princeton.

"There was not a face in that crowd," he said, "that was not familiar to me. All my old friends were there. Of course I can be pardoned as a Princeton man for believing that 'Old Nassau' is the most affecting college song I know, and it was particularly delightful to have it sung in farewell."

Mrs. Annie W. Howe, sister of the President-elect, and Col. Thomas H. Birch, aide to Mr. Wilson as Governor of New Jersey, joined the party at West Philadelphia.

WASHINGTON JAMMED WITH GREAT CROWD FOR THE INAUGURAL.

WASHINGTON, March 3.—Two hundred and fifty thousand people poured into the national capital to-day—a heterogeneous mass of visitors, militiamen, regulars, marching clubs and suffragettes.

Notables came on every train, but the city awaited the arrival of the man in whose honor all the decorations, all the cheers and all the ceremony was arranged—the President-elect. He was scheduled to arrive at 3:45 this afternoon.

Extraordinary police preparations were made to guard him. The Union Station's huge rooms were jammed with a mass of humanity—visitors arriving and visitors and residents who gathered to watch the triumphant entry into Washington of the new President.

At the Capitol where weary Senators and Representatives assembled early to straighten out legislative tangles and attempt to finish the business of the session, now near its close, thousands of visitors clogged the galleries and corridors.

At the White House President Taft had a busy day striving to "put his house in order" for the new Executive. Hundreds of officials came to bid him goodbye and go-ahead. The last bit of pecking up-and-the last touch of house-cleaning for the new occupants of the White House were done.

At the Shoreham Hotel the Wilson relatives awaited the coming of their kinsman. There were nearly a score of them, and tonight the President-elect will be their guest at a family dinner.

WILSON AND MARSHALL AT THE SAME HOTEL.

Vice-President-elect Marshall, at the same hotel, took his final look at the big book of rules of the Senate, and was ready to sit in the Vice-Presidential chair to-morrow at noon. He and Wilson will have a brief conference this evening.

Major-Gen. Wood, grand marshal of the inaugural parade, called his aides into a final conference to-day, mapping out the last details of what will be the biggest inaugural pageant in the history of Washington. More than half of the marchers arrived to-day and to-night all but a very few will be here. Their quarters in the city had been arranged and the men were distributed in public halls, the corridors of public buildings, barracks and hotels. Sleeping space for tonight was at a premium long before noon to-day.

Many paid enormous prices for a cut in a hotel corridor or permission to sleep on tables in basements. But the carnival spirit reigned everywhere. The police had surprisingly little trouble controlling the crowds. Everybody took small discomforts good-naturedly. Most of the arrests were of sneak thieves, of whom a small army is here.

Detectives from all the big cities—men who know the rogues' galleries by heart—waited local plain clothes men to nabbing every suspicious character. A horde of fakers with every conceivable sort of noise-making device, ingenious badge, souvenir, banner and knickknack reaped a golden harvest in the crowds.

U. S. SUPREME COURT BREAKS A PRECEDENT.

Even the Supreme Court of the United States caught the Wilson fever and broke a precedent to-day.

The Justices decided to wear skull caps at the inauguration. Always heretofore—since George Washington took the oath of office—they have stood with bare heads during the swearing in ceremonies.

"What's the use of our catching our deaths of cold just because it has been the custom heretofore?" is alleged to have been the argument that biased the precedent.

It has been a matter of record that one or more justices have died indirectly as a result of standing uncovered while the President took the oath. The skull caps were ordered to be made of silk and lined with plush, so as to be warm. The Justices will wear heavy overcoats under their judicial robes.

WILSON HAS THE MOLE REMOVED FROM FOREHEAD.

Appearance Greatly Improved by the Cutting Away of the Disfigurement.

PRINCETON, March 3.—While President-elect Wilson was waiting today for his train to start for Washington the crowd at the station noticed that the large mole heretofore on the center of his forehead had been removed.

His appearance was greatly improved by the cutting away of the disfigurement.

TAMMANY COHORTS JOIN THOUSANDS OFF TO INAUGURAL

Pennsylvania and Jersey Central Roads Send Out Scores of Special Trains.

MURPHY IS A DODGER.

1,500 Tammanyites on Specials and Twice That Number on Regular Trains.

The busiest place in New York to-day was the Pennsylvania Station, from which regular trains, running in sections, and special trains were shot through the tube and out into the Jersey meadows, Washington-bound. Like balls down a bowling alley during a swift game. Although the wreck at Rahway proved a severe handicap to the handling of traffic, preparations had been made for just such an emergency and the railroad men arose to it.

The plans for handling tens of thousands of Washington passengers in addition to the regular traffic had been covered down to the smallest item of detail, and even a wreck on the main line was not allowed to interfere with the schedule. Even in the face of the possibility of tying up long lines of trains between Newark and Rahway, the thirty specials and the long succession of regular trains were sent out as though the line were clear.

JERSEY CENTRAL ALSO TAXED TO FULFILL EXTENT.

The Central Railroad of New Jersey in connection with the Baltimore and Ohio handled almost as many passengers for Washington as the Pennsylvania. Beginning at 10 o'clock this morning the Jersey Central sent trains from the Communipaw terminal as fast as the blocks in the signal system could be cleared.

In addition to the trains originating in New York, the Pennsylvania had to handle all the extra traffic from New England. Special trains from the New York, New Haven and Hartford were taken round the city on barges from Mott Haven to Jersey City. It was one of these that was wrecked at Rahway.

Tammany Hall sent more than 1,500 men in seven specials, four over the Pennsylvania and three over the Baltimore and Ohio. In addition about 3,000 officials and the long succession of Tammanyites went out on regular trains.

Charles F. Murphy and Thomas F. Smith, Secretary of Tammany Hall, went to Washington on a regular train in advance of the hosts of the organization. The first special train, carrying the Fifth, Ninth and Thirtieth Assembly District organizations, under command of Frank Goodwin, left at 1:32 o'clock. Four minutes later the second section, conveying the Fifteenth, Seventeenth, Eighteenth and Nineteenth District organizations, captained by The McManis, started for Washington.

McMANIS BAND TO LEAD TAMMANY IN PARADE.

The other two sections, carrying the upper east side and Bronx district and the new silk hat of William Shannon, leader of the Twentieth District, left at four-minute intervals. The Baltimore and Ohio specials left between 1 and 2 o'clock, the third train carrying Bayne's Sixty-ninth Regiment Band, which is to lead the Tammany delegation in the parade to-morrow and a couple of hundred Tammanyites not identified with the district organizations.

The Kings County Democracy, with a buffet car in the middle of the train to avoid extra long trips from either end, left at 10:30 o'clock. The Yorkers crowd, 200 strong, left fifteen minutes before noon. The Brooklyners started next, a delegation of 300 Democrats and Republicans sent a smaller delegation yesterday.

Each of the 1,500 Tammanyites detailed to represent the organization in the parade to-morrow either wore or carried a plug hat. Most of them wore their hats and carried the frog coats and light gloves they are to wear in the parade in suit cases. Charles F. Murphy was one of the few who had a specially built for a silk hat. It was carried by Phil Donohue, Treasurer of Tammany Hall, during the boss's last night of the duties pertaining to that arduous office.

Every active Tammany worker who possessed the price of a ticket was on one or another of the Tammany specials or on a regular train. To recite the names of those who went down to see Wilson inaugurated would be to print a roster of the actual strength of Tammany Hall as an organization.

One of them was George W. Plunkitt, for many years high in Tammany councils, but now on the retired list and attorney at law, who was in London on a business trip, and who was expected to return to New York to-day.

Walter wormed his way into the Adair household soon after the accident, said Mr. Baldwin, by a pretended interest in pigeons, of which Adair is a fancier. By pretending sympathy with the boy's affliction Walter became a companion of the boy, taking him on outings, once, said the lawyer, he tried to get the boy to go swimming at Rockaway.

It was at this point that the railroad's attorneys asked Justice Adams to declare a mistrial and discharge the jury on the ground that Baldwin was poisoning the jury's mind with a belief in the railroad's guilt.

Mr. Baldwin said that during a visit to Yonkers the boy was given liquor. He said the boy returned home dazed and sick and doctors said he had been given knockout drops.

When the United States Circuit Court was abolished a year ago and its functions taken over by the United States District Court, the latter tribunal found its calendars clogged with 1,200 cases in which no move had been made by the attorneys in more than a decade.

To do away with this mass of dormant litigation Judge Holt has had a special calendar of these cases prepared.

This morning he called part of that calendar and dismissed 122 of the cases "without costs or prejudice to either party." Judge Holt will continue to call this calendar throughout this week until all of the 1,200 cases have been cleared away.

CROSSES SEA TO WED MAN SHE NEVER SAW; BACKS OFF.

Pretty Italian Girl Accuses Half-Sister of Attempting to Force Her to Keep Bargain.

Pretty Mariano Gravano, eighteen years old, promised to marry Michael Cettilio if he would pay his passage here from Italy. But she made the proviso that if he didn't like Michael, having never seen him, she would not marry him and would pay him back his $50. The negotiations were carried on through her half sister, Mrs. Josephine Anero, living at No. 251 Croton avenue, the Bronx.

The girl reached here Feb. 21 and went next day with Michael to the Church of St. Philip of Neri. Father Condigo told them they must first get a marriage license, which they did. Then Mariano experienced a change of heart and decided to wed. For the next few days the girl's half sister, with whom she lived, tried to force her into marriage, she says, and her uncle, Raphaelo Marano, got out a summons for Mrs. Anero.

The family and Cettilio were in the Morrisania Police Court to-day. Magistrate Herbert told Mariano that in this country a girl could marry anybody she chose and that neither her sister nor Michael must bother her. He told her: if she were annoyed any more to call a policeman.

BOY TAXI BANDIT GUILTY.

Eighteen-year-old Charles Hilpi Admits Driving Holdup.

Charles Hilpi, the eighteen-year-old messenger of No. 11 Lawrence street, Brooklyn, who lured Walter Michener, the elderly manager of the Fulton Market branch of the Postal Telegraph Company, into a taxi cab on Jan. 25, beat him over the head and tried to rob him of $227, pleaded guilty before Judge Malone in the Court of General Sessions this afternoon. He was remanded to the Tombs for sentence on March 16.

Prosecution officers are looking up Hilpi's record. His crime was well received and daring, but Mr. Michener fought him off and attracted the attention of crowds through which the taxi cab was passing in Broadway opposite the City Hall.

HOLD BOY FOR ARSON.

Nicholas Wellet, eighteen years old, of No. 292 Frelinghuysen avenue, Newark, was committed to jail in default of $1,000 bail by Judge Hahn to-day on a charge of setting fire to Loprete's junk warehouse on Frelinghuysen avenue on Jan. 26 last. The damage by the blaze was $10,000.

Last night there was an alarm of fire from the same box and Wellet was arrested on a charge of having sent the alarm.

The police say the boy then admitted having set the fire on Jan. 28. He said that Loprete owed him wages and would not pay him.

CONGRESS FACES ALL-NIGHT SESSION; DEADLOCKED AT END

Both Houses in a Maze Over Two-Battleship Plan on Inauguration Eve.

WASHINGTON, March 3.—With less than twenty-four hours to live, the Sixty-second Congress to-day found itself entangled in a maze of conference reports on many of the big supply bills which ordinarily must be disposed of before to-morrow noon.

The prospect is that both House and Senate will be in continual session until the moment the inaugural ceremonies begin. The battleship fight, with the House holding out for one ship and the Senate insisting on two, appears to be the key log in the jam. Both sides are insistent.

Other measures in conference to-day were not embarrassed by such serious difficulties, and while the conferees were negotiating the Senate and House were practically marking time.

The Senate refused to accept the conference agreement on the public buildings bill and sent the measure back for further consideration.

The agricultural appropriation bill, as agreed to in the conference committee, was finally accepted by the Senate. It contained the Congressional Free and appropriation which the Senate had cut out, but which the House insisted on retaining.

Another effort to reach a compromise on the battleship programme resulted in failure and the House and Senate conferees broke up with a complete disagreement. Senators Perkins, Penrose and Tamm, and Representative Foss insisted upon adhering to the two battleship plan of the Senate, while Representatives Padgett and Strong would not yield from the one ship decision of the House.

Found Dying in Arroyo.

James Foley, a laborer, of No. 26 Seventh avenue, was found unconscious to-day in the arroyo of No. 414 West Thirty-seventh street. Both of his arms were broken and he was evidently suffering from internal injuries. It is believed that he jumped from the third story window of an unoccupied apartment in the building. Foley was taken to Bellevue Hospital. When he regained consciousness he gave no explanation of his fall.

NEARLY FAILED OWING TO LACK OF CONFIDENCE

Brooklyn Man Nearly Threw Away Chance of Good Health by Being Skeptic.

CHEERFULLY RECOMMENDS

Tona Vita, Since It Made Him Feel, Eat and Sleep Better.

"Worry, caused largely by the failure to benefit from many different remedies, is one of the principal troubles of nervous debility," stated one of the physicians engaged in introducing Tona Vita.

"One of the marked features of the tonic I am introducing is the quick relief which gives the patient the necessary confidence so that good results will follow."

"Many of the voluntary testimonials I am receiving state how hopeless the patient felt after taking many remedies without relief. Take the case of John Pietmeyer of No. 72 Van Cortlandt avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y., who said:

"I was run down for a long time, owing to study, overwork and hurry. I found doctors and medicine gave me no relief. I came across an advertisement of Tona Vita one day and read it through in a half-hearted, skeptical manner. A second reading decided me to try Tona Vita, and I am thankful ever since. I feel more energetic, eat better, sleep better, and can cheerfully recommend Tona Vita as a reliable remedy to all who are similarly affected."

"Nervous debility is hard to relieve," continued the physician, "since one of the symptoms is a morbid imagination, which makes the patient skeptical and doubting, and confidence is a necessary attribute for quick relief."

"Any of the following symptoms may denote the presence of the ailment: pains in the back, loss of weight, poor complexion, or that run-down feeling."

"All the leading drug stores in New York City are handling this new tonic."
